Summit County Executive Named Crain’s Women of Note Honoree

On July 17, 2019, Summit County Executive Ilene Shapiro was named a Crain’s Cleveland Business Women of Note honoree. Each year, the magazine celebrates the lives and accomplishments of women in Northeast Ohio who have made the region a better place for all to work and live.

“All throughout Northeast Ohio women are making a difference in their organizations and their communities,” said Executive Shapiro. “I feel honored to have been included in the 2019 Crain’s Women of Note class. I am especially thankful to have been included among such a distinguished group of women.”

Crain’s Cleveland Business annually honors a group of exceptional women who have demonstrated commitment to Northeast Ohio and its people. In many cases, they’ve risen above adversity and, most importantly, the so-called glass ceiling. A panel of Crain’s editors selected this year’s class from a deep pool of nominations. This year’s class was honored during a luncheon at Public Auditorium in Cleveland.
